

Explore

Over five miles of trails grace the ridges and ravines within Shelton View Forest. This tranquil space has long been a favorite of locals, including hikers, runners, mountain bikers, dog owners, wildlife photographers, and students.

The forest provides critical habitat for wildlife in an urban setting. More than fifty species of birds live or visit here, including owls and woodpeckers. On occasion, deer, bobcat, and coyote have been seen. Native fern, Salal, and Oregon grape grow beneath a canopy of cedar, big leaf maple, and Douglas fir.

The forest is located within a 10 minute drive for over 45,000 Bothell residents, and is a draw for outdoor enthusiasts throughout the region. Visit today and join us in protecting it for current and future generations.

Protect the Forest!

Shelton View Forest is at risk of development! The Shelton View Forest Stewardship Association (SVFSA) has been working since 2015 to save this unique urban forest. Now, we need your help! Join our efforts to preserve this space by making your voice heard and ask your friends and neighbors to do the same! To find out more about how you can help:
